The illustration depicts two anthropomorphic molecules, Hemoglobin and Cuprum, working together to transport Iron (Besi). On the left, Hemoglobin, represented by a red sphere, is carrying a large orange rectangular block labeled 'besi'. Cuprum, represented by an orange sphere, stands beside it, holding a smaller orange cube also labeled 'besi'. They are both wearing blue shirts, light blue shorts, and brown boots. On the right, they have moved to a new location where Hemoglobin is carrying a large orange rectangular block labeled 'besi', and Cuprum is carrying a smaller orange cube labeled 'besi'. The background is a plain, light color.

Kekurangan pengambilan yang tidak Malaysia

- Mineral tidak dapat dihasilkan kita, jadi kita bergantung diet harian untuk memperolehnya. Tidak semua orang mencapai pengambilan yang disyorkan.
- Status pengambilan

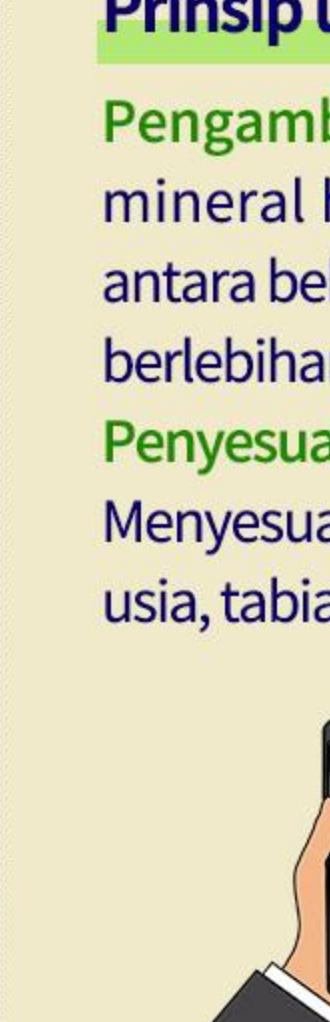

Menurut MANS
kalsium dan zat
kurang, terutama

kalangan wanita. Lebih separuh populasi dewasa mempunyai pengalaman yang kurang daripada separuh jumlah 1,000 mg/hari yang disyorkan.

Masalah anemia:
Terutama dalam kalangan wanita usia reproduktif, golongan muda dan warga emas di Malaysia.

Langkah mencukupi: Pengambilan suplemen mengekalkan "keseimbangan antara permintaan." Elakkan kekurangan.

Langkah menurut keperluan peribadi: Pengambilan mineral berdasarkan hidup, dan status kesihatan.

An illustration depicting the concept of dietary supplements. In the center is a large green plastic bottle with a white label, representing a supplement. A man in a blue shirt and grey pants stands on the left, reaching towards various healthy food items like broccoli, carrots, and salmon that are floating in the air. On the right, a woman in a yellow shirt and blue skirt stands with her hands clasped near her heart, also reaching for similar healthy items. Several smaller, yellowish-green bottles with the letters 'DDIX' printed on them are scattered on the ground around the main bottle, suggesting they are inferior or fake alternatives.
